Week For Celebration Of Children's Books

WITH more than one hundred children's books scheduled for publication before Christmas, and in spite of wartime restrictions and paper shortages, publishers' announcements mark the tremendous interest in interest in books for boys and girls which will be featured on the national celebration of Children's Book Week, November 11-17. The theme of this year's Book Week, "United Through Books," is also reflected in the great number of books on other topics and other countries in the publishers' fall announcements.

Libraries, schools, bookstores, and gift groups all over the country will work during the week to bring children's books and their importance to the attention of their communities. The twenty-four national organizations cooperating with the Children's Book Council to sponsor Children's Book Week believe that making more books available to more children today is one of the best ways of insuring an enlightened, thinking citizenry tomorrow. They are making every effort to have Book Week a celebration in every community.

National Headquarters of Book Week, at 62 W. 42nd St., N. Y. C. 19, will provide a free and complete directory for Book Week on request. They will also supply a complete list of books for sale.

Many U. S. Vessels Salvaged by Navy

Clearing Manila Bay One of Largest Undertakings.

WASHINGTON. - Military and naval craft valued at millions of dollars, in addition to an estimated $500,000,000 in sunken merchant ships and cargo, were salvaged during the war, the navy has announced.

One of the last and largest jobs of naval salvage units prior to the Japanese surrender was the clearing of 600 vessels from Manila bay. Many of them had been sunk by American army and navy fliers prior to the Philippine invasion, and others were scuttled by the Japanese.

The Manila bay job began immediately after the Lingayen gun landings last January and was in full swing within two weeks with 600 men and 60 officers engaged in the task while simultaneously fighting off Japanese snipers who would pick off the salvage crews when they returned to work the next day.

The entire navy salvage force numbered less than 2,000 officers and men, but its record was written in North Africa, Italy, France and in the Pacific. Some of the refloated vessels were used again by the army or navy, while others were either blown up or towed out of the harbors to "graveyards."

Operations along the Atlantic and Pacific coasts of the United States were done by a commercial salvage firm, operating under navy direction.

Psychiatric Cases Are Returned to Active Duty

PORT CUSTER, MICH.—An army spokesman disclosed recently that approximately 90 per cent of the army's overseas neuro-psychiatric cases were sent back to duty, 85 per cent of them being returned to combat outfits.

Dr. Eli Ginsberg, chief of the resources analysis division of the surgeon general's department, told officers at a three-day army service forces convalescent hospital conference here that only 10 per cent of the men were brought back to this country for treatment. Nevertheless, Ginsberg said, more neuro-psychiatric than medical cases were returned from the Pacific theater from January 1 to June 30 of this year.

Ginsberg said that for every four medical cases and every nine battle wound cases there were two psychiatric cases.

Cupboard's Mighty Bare Here, Britons Advised

LONDON, ENGLAND.—Three visiting congressmen told British reporters recently that the United States "cupboard is getting mighty bare."

The three are Representatives Mundt (Rep., S. D.), Bolton (Rep., Ohio) and Ryter (Dem., Fla.), and are members of the House Foreign Affairs Committee.

A British reporter asked: "Don't you think it was a little rough to end lend-lease shipments so abruptly?"

Mundt, the spokesman, said no, "the war is over."

Mrs. Bolton said she had not seen better in her home for five months, that sugar was hard to get, meat scarce and fuel almost impossible to obtain in the United States.

Crime Wave of 'Slaves'

In Bremen Is Suppressed

FRANKFURT AM MAIN. — The United States army said recently that order had been restored in the Bremen area following a crime wave in which gangs of former slave laborers treated all Germans as "fair game."

Troops of the 29th infantry division joined with military government forces in curbing attacks that had reached "serious" proportions, the official announcement said.

"Because many erstwhile slave laborers have been reluctant to be reeducated and because they consider all Germans to be 'fair game,' the looting of farms and attacks upon civil policemen have been mounting during midsummer," the announcement said.

Lt. Col. R. R. MacDonald, United States public safety section, said that the situation now is well in hand.
